ROOTS & CRAYONS

Շնորհակալություն

shnor-ha-ka-loo-TYOON, that means “thank you”

Dear family,

Thank you for bringing Feelings & Emotions into your home. Somewhere at your table, a little one is about to say an Armenian word with you, and that is how a language stays alive: one kitchen table at a time.

These cards were made at our own table, by a mom learning right alongside her daughter. You don't need to be fluent. Every card has an easy sound-it-out line, so you can say each word with confidence, whether your Armenian is a little rusty or brand new.

Print them, color them, tape them to the fridge. A grandparent's voice, a song in the car, a word at bedtime: it all counts, and it all adds up.

From our family to yours,

Pamela
Roots & Crayons

One word a day

Pick a card at breakfast and use the word all day.

Hand it to a grandparent

Let them read the Armenian while little ones point and act it out.

Make it theirs

Color the ink-saver cards, laminate the favorites, let them get worn.

Feelings & Emotions

Ապրե՛ս ap-RES, that means “well done”

Thank you for bringing Armenian home.

Make them last

- Print at Actual size (100%). Cardstock, 65–110 lb (176–300 gsm), makes sturdy cards.
- Cut on the dashed lines. Two cuts make four cards.
- To laminate, cut first, leave space between cards in the pouch, then trim around each one. Sealed edges last longer.
- Punch a corner and keep a set on a ring for the car or the diaper bag.

Three games to play

- Find it. Spread a few cards out. Say a word in Armenian, and your little one finds it.
- Memory match. Print two copies, mix them face down, then flip to find pairs, saying each word.
- Ask Tatik. Hand the cards to a grandparent. They read the Armenian, and kids point or act it out.

Black-and-white printer? Every pack also comes as an Ink-saver file, with clean outlines that double as coloring pages.
